FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

2015 CUNY FILM FESTIVAL PREMIERE AT MACAULAY HONORS COLLEGE SHOWCASES DIVERSITY AND SOCIAL JUSTICE ISSUES

A cross-section of filmmakers, genres and themes reflect a distinct CUNY point of view

New York, NY—March 13, 2015. Macaulay Honors College is proud to present the 2015 CUNY Film Festival on March 29, 2015 at the College. The event, now in its seventh year, features cinema focusing on social justice, urban life, assimilation, and globalization themes expressed through innovative animation, comedy, and other dramatic representation. The gathering will include the announcement of winning films, and among the scheduled presenters are NY1 film critic Neil Rosen, documentary filmmaker Stephanie Wang-Breal, and Shine Global co-founder Susan MacLaury, whose team won the Oscar for best short documentary in 2013 for Inocente. Industry leader and award winning producer Robert Small directs the Macaulay New Media Lab, which oversees the CUNY Film Festival activities.

“This is an exciting year for the CUNY Film Festival as it continues to grow and generate much enthusiasm in the CUNY and film communities,” said Macaulay New Media Lab director Robert Small. “The number of entries this year has doubled over last year and feature cinema depicting a range of issues and emotions, some of them very personal and relationship-oriented. For the first time this year, we’ll have a grand jury prize for the best overall film.”

The Macaulay New Media Lab is an atelier-style learning center where students actively engage in content development for all screens (TV, tablets, phones). Student organizers and the New Media Lab produce the event, the largest and most diverse showcase of the university's cinematic talent to date. Originally begun by a group of Macaulay Honors College students, the CUNY Film Festival is the only venue to showcase film and media work from the entire network of CUNY campuses. The students incorporate “user engagement” methods to create content and also learn about production models for digital studios, prototypes and pitches, digital deal-making, and selling content to multiple distribution channels.

The premiere event for the 2015 CUNY Film Festival takes place Sunday, March 29th at 35 West 67th Street. The event begins at 6:00pm and also will include screenings and Q&A session. The event is free and open to all.
